Plane Wreckage Found By Class

Brigham Young University's camping education class under the direction of Thayne J. Packer, associate professor of youth leadership, accidentally stumbled across the wreckage of a privately owned T-34 Beechcraft airplane, lost since INDICATIONS SHOWED that the plane probably crashed due to poor weather. It was found approximately 100 yards from the top of the peak. Hopwood's body was thrown out of the plane with his feet pointing toward the rim of the peak. The remains of the body were badly decomposed.

It looked as though the plane had burned for a short time, but personal effects found in the plane were still in good condition. On Sunday, professor Packer brought out the plane's log to establish the identity of the plane and body.

MONDAY MORNING, University reporters climbed up to the wreckage for the purpose of taking still and moving pictures.

Duchesne County sheriff's deputies were to hike into the area Tuesday guided by Tom James to investigate the seven-month old wreckage.

ROGER COX, seminary teacher, and Mrs. Tom James, wife of BYU's special courses and conferences coordinator, were the first two class members to reach the wreckage. Cox's wife, Kaye, found Tsgt. "Al" Hopwood's wallet under a rock near the scene of the crash. Hopwood was stationed at Shepherd AFB, Wichita Falls, Texas.

Papers found in a portfolio indicated that Hopwood had been to New Mexico, Arizona, Reno, Nevada; and had last gassed up at Edde's in Salt Lake City on November 22, 1965.

BILL SAMPSON, registration officer at BYU, and James, also hiked to the area Monday. Sampson found several personal effects, including a gold cap from one of Hopwood's teeth, money amounting to a little over five dollars, one suitcase, a "ditty" bag, and another portfolio.

The wreckage was scattered over an area of some 200 feet, with engine parts, glass, radio equipment, helmet, and other related items being found.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

Last Wednesday morning, June 15, I made a United Air Lines business trip to New York City utilizing our 7:00 a.m. departure from Chicago. On board this flight was your University's folk dancing group. They were the finest appearing and best behaved group of young Americans I've ever seen. Every one of the young men and women had fine short haircuts. They were such ladies and gentlemen that it was clearly obvious to all of us aboard the flight. They were keenly enthusiastic about their Alma Mater and their wonderful trip ahead of them. Your school can certainly be proud of them.

As a University of Wyoming graduate (38) and an American, I'm immensely proud to have them represent me on their tour of Europe.

Sincerely,
Edward H. Clay

IN DEVOTIONAL SPEECH . . .

Elder Brockbank Outlines Religious Plans

Elder Bernard P. Brockbank asked BYU students which of the three religious plans they wanted to follow and then gave a simple outline to follow at a devotional assembly Tuesday.

AN ASSISTANT to the Quorum of the Twelve, Elder Brockbank talked of meeting thousands of people at the Mormon Pavilion at the New York World's Fair. He said he had found that people fall into three religious categories: those following God's plan, those following plans made by men, and those following their own individual plans.

Whenever he asked these people which plan they would be under they wanted to follow God's plan. "THERE ARE CERTAIN THINGS we must do to follow that plan," Elder Brockbank said.

"WE CANNOT PLEASE GOD without faith. It is a gift from God without which we cannot reach the Celestial Kingdom," he reminded the students.

"The best way to get faith according to Elder Brockbank is to kneel and pray for it. "However, you'll have to expect more works," he noted, recalling that faith without works is dead.

"HEAVENLY FATHER is anxious that we have all the faith we can use and magnify. It moves us toward what our Heavenly Father wants for us."

Another part of the plan is repentance.

"THIS IS THE PROGRAM we must use all the days of our lives if we are to progress," he pointed out.

"It moves out the black in our lives and moves us away from sin toward positive things," he said.

HE NOTED THAT it is important to read the scriptures because if we fail to know the scriptures we fail to know God's plan.

"Until we master with the tools we have the problem of putting Satan behind us, we haven't cleared the darkness from the pathway to Heaven," he pointed out in talking of the importance of following Jesus Christ. He said also that it is important for all Church members to help their friends find the way to follow Christ.

"REPENTANCE HELPS to clear anything we do have in the way from our lives and helps us prepare to meet God," Elder Brockbank said.

Before being appointed to his present Church position, Elder Brockbank was a well-known Salt Lake City building contractor. He was active in building associations as well as in civic affairs.

He was president of the Scottish Mission.
